RegTech Data Summit 2019

THE INTERSECTION OF REGULATION, DATA, AND TECHNOLOGY

Regulatory technology (RegTech) is transforming the regulatory reporting process for the financial industry and the U.S. federal government. The U.S. financial regulatory reporting system is burdensome and fragmented. RegTech can help address these problems, but only if government and industry work together to organize regulatory data.

On Tuesday, April 23, the Data Coalition will host its annual RegTech Data Summit in New York City, presented by Donnelley Financial Solutions (DFIN). The Summit will bring together financial regulators, industry leaders, RegTech experts, academics, and open data advocates as they discuss the latest innovations and what the future will hold for RegTech. The full-day Summit will cover three key topics: Enterprise Digitization, Reporting Modernization, and Open Data Standards.

The 2019 RegTech Data Summit will explore the intersection of regulatory reporting, emerging technology, and open data standards as we work to solve the challenges facing government, regulators, and industry.

Projected registration is 200 to 250, representing leaders from across federal agencies, the financial and banking industry, and the private sector.
