Mark Montoya is currently Senior Business Analyst for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's Division of Insurance and Research. In this capacity, Mark is responsible for directing complex analysis on banking industry trends and conditions including the supervision of complex statistical and financial information. Mark has co-authored the Financial Stability Board's Global Legal Entity Identifier (LEI) whitepaper and has contributed additional reference papers concerning legal entity identifiers. Mark was one of the original founders of the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council's (FFIEC) Central Data Repository (CDR), an XBRL-based financial reporting collection system accessed and shared by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, the U.S. Office of Comptroller of Currency and the U.S. FDIC. Mark has presented and shared lessons learned in financial data collection and analysis to U.S. and international regulatory agencies since 2006.
